Arianna Bussoletti

PROFILE AND RESEARCH INTERESTS

Postdoctoral research fellow at the department of Communication and Social Research (Sapienza University of Rome) for the project "Digital and Social media for Communicating Trust in Science, Research and Innovation" (AR-B 4/2022). She holds a doctorate in Communication, Social Research, and Marketing (Sapienza University of Rome) with a thesis on the interconnection between social media usages, youth climate activism, and generational identity.

Her research projects and experiences have been in the fields of: Youth digital activism (social media activism and identity-building practices, generation-specific sense makings, climate activism, intersections between digital technology and society); Gender and queer studies (media representations, queer communities on social media, gender and social media, queer cultures, non-binary identities, interplay between social media usage and identity expression/curation/formation); Fan and audience studies (Tumblr studies, participatory cultures, international and transnational fandoms, fan activism). The results of her research have been presented in international conferences and published in books and book chapters as well as in A class and high-impact journals.

She has matured a strong multicultural background by incorporating English as a second language in all of her work and academic activities, and by pursuing academic exchanges in international contexts, such as conferences and as a visiting researcher at the University of Cardiff.

RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

2023 – present Digital and Social media for Communicating Trust in Science, Research and Innovation

Research fellow (Assegnista di ricerca, research grant AR-B 4/2022) – Sapienza, University of Rome;
Supervisor: Francesca Comunello

The project is part of the IANUS (Inspiring and Anchoring Trust in Science, Research, and Innovation) project, funded by Horizon (Grant agreement ID: 101058158).

It analyzes the role of digital and social media in inspiring and communicating trust in science, research, and innovation. Activities covered during the grant are especially related to WP7, led by Coris-Sapienza, and are dedicated to the communication and dissemination of the project and of its findings. At the same time, research on science communication and digital science communication will also be carried out, particularly relating to the creation and communication of trust, the mechanisms that favor disinformation and distrust in scientific knowledge, especially on social media, and how to counter them.

- 2022 – present Discriminazione intelligente o artificiale? Un’analisi delle strategie di conciliazione tra processi di news-making e logiche algoritmiche nella diffusione delle notizie sull’immigrazione da parte delle redazioni online locali in Italia
- Participation as researcher in Small Research Project (Progetto di Ricerca di Ateneo Piccolo) - Sapienza, University of Rome
- The project intends to create a bridge between media and migration studies and critical algorithm studies in order to analyze the interconnection and mutual shaping between news-making processes and algorithmic logics in the creation and dissemination of news related to immigration and migrants in Italy.
- 2021- present Social media and vaccine confidence: exploring knowledge needs, media use, and social representations of health and vaccine-related issues among Italian teens
- Participation as researcher in Large Research Project (Progetto di Ricerca di Ateneo Grande) - Sapienza, University of Rome
- The project analyzes the role of social media in health communication, and especially in vaccine-related perception and communication, with a focus on young people and teenagers. It considers the whole variety of vaccines targeting teenagers in Italy, including the HPV vaccine, the meningococcal vaccine, and the anti SARS-CoV-2 vaccine.
- 2020 – present Youth risk-taking and social media challenges. Perception and experience of risk in online ‘dangerous games’
- Participation in the research project funded by Sapienza University of Rome and coordinated by Paola Panarese (Dep. of Communication and Social Research, Sapienza University of Rome).
- The research identifies the main hermeneutical dimensions characterizing the risk-related attitudes and behaviors of young people in social-media-based dangerous games and challenges. Research results so far have been published on international journals such as YOUNG (2020).
- 2021 – 2022 ‘We, the future without future:’ exploring the interplay between youth activism and generational identity in the social media usage practices of FridaysForFuture
- Principal Investigator of Starting Research Project, type I (Progetto di Avvio alla ricerca di tipo I) – Sapienza, University of Rome; Supervisor: Francesca Comunello
- The research builds on literature addressing youth social media activism, generational identity and ‘we sense’, and climate activism to investigate the interplay between generational identity and youth social media activism focusing on FFFRome activists. It analyzes their social media usage practices to open windows in the unique ways young people make sense of social media as environments for both digital activism and generational identity-building processes. Research results’ have been accepted as papers at the 2022 conference of the Media, Communication and Cultural Studies Association (MeCCSA) and the 2022 conference of the European Communication Research and Education Association (ECREA).
- 2020 - 2022 Teen climate activism e social media: indagine esplorativa sul movimento #FridaysForFuture in Italia
- Participation in the research project funded by Sapienza University and coordinated by Francesca Belotti (Dep. of Communication and Social Research, Sapienza University of Rome).
- The research explores the technopolitical usages of social media by the activists participating in the #FridaysForFuture movement in Rome. It focuses on the interplay between social representations of climate change, digital activism, and generational belonging. Research results have been presented as papers at the 2021 editions of the International Association for Media and Communication Research (IAMCR), Association of Internet Researchers (AoIR), Italian Scientific Society of Sociology, Culture and Communication (SISCC)’s conferences, and at the 2021 pre-conference of the International Communication Association (ICA). They have been published in the 2022 volume “FridaysForFuture. Rappresentazioni sociali del cambiamento climatico e pratiche d’uso dei social media" (edited by Franco Angeli) and the 2022 paper "Youth activism for climate change on and beyond social media: insights from FridaysForFuture-Rome" on the International Journal of Press/Politics.

2020 Tipping+, Enabling Positive Tipping Points towards clean-energy transitions in Coal and Carbon Intensive Regions

Participation in the project funded under H2020-EU.3.3.6. (2020).

Tipping+ is a European Research and Innovation Action focusing on the concept of social-ecological tipping points (SETPs) to study the role played by scientific understanding of social, economic, psychological, cultural, gender, and political processes in supporting clean energy transitions in CCIRs towards low-carbon clean energy futures.

Research results have been published in international journals such as Environmental Innovation and Societal Transitions (2022), Earth System Governance (2021), and Sustainability Science (2021), as well as in the "Handbook of Climate Change Management" (2021), edited by Springer.

2020 2020 Global Media Monitoring Project (GMMP) – Italian team

Member of the Italian team for monitoring day (September 29, 2020). Monitoring and coding activities related to the representation of women in online newspapers.

The GMMP is the largest international study of gender in the news media and an advocacy organization that aims to change the representation of women in the news media. Every five years it collects data on indicators of gender in the news (i.e. the presence of women, gender bias, and stereotyping).

Research results have been collected in a Global Report, as well as in local reports, such as the European and Italian ones. Results concerning the latter have also been disseminated during a public online seminary hosted by the University of Padua and titled "Global Media Monitoring Project 2020/21: Genere e media in Italia nel contesto della pandemia Covid-19."

A restitution event organized at the conclusion of a research with(in) FridaysForFuture-Rome. It was hosted at the Città dell'Altra Economia (CAE), an independent space in Rome that supports and experiments with alternative economy practices inspired by solidarity, respect towards the environment, and social responsibility. The event was organized following consolidated practices and norms within FFF-Rome for external events and assemblies. It consisted in an informal presentation of the results of the research, which immediately turned into a discussion on grassroots activism, the future of the group, the challenges facing climate activism, and how to better do research 'with' activist groups rather than 'about' them.
